

Selectors 8th-21st May 2010

Private view is on Saturday 8th May 2.30-5.00pm.
at Key Arts, St Mary-at-the-Quay Church

Selectors, a group exhibition looking at the practice of artists who sample everyday objects and their pre-established associations and meanings in order to create a new dialogue between the viewer and the object and the objects themselves. The exhibition will investigate the artists gaze as a creative process and the transformative, alchemist like quality to recode an item found on the street or a mass-produced item bought from the high street.

Selectors wishes to engage with the questioning of traditional values in the production of artwork, such as technical skill, manual labour, authorship and originality.

The show has works from recent MA graduates from the Chelsea college of Art and design, as well as artists from Ipswich and Norwich.

The exhibition opens on Saturday 8th may and runs until Friday 21st May open 10.30-5.00pm Fridays to Sundays and by appointment Mondays to Thursdays.

Key Arts is an artist run space in the heart of Ipswich's waterfront showcasing contemporary art to encourage debate and develop local artistic talent.

Parking behind the church (80p an hour at the time of going to press).
